THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1734.

A New Critical Review of the public buildings, &c. by Mr. HIRAM.

XLI. THE wall of Burlington-houſe preſents itſelf next to our conſideration; of which our Critic gives the following account, pag. 33. 'It is the moſt expenſive wall in England: — Nothing material can be objected to it, and much may be ſaid in its praiſe: ——— The height is wonderfully well proportioned to the length, and the decorations are both ſimple and magnificent: — The grand entrance is auguſt and beautiful, and by covering the houſe entirely from the eye, gives pleaſure and ſurprize at the opening of the whole front, with the area before it at once. — If any thing can be found fault with, 'tis, that the wall is not exactly on a line; that the columns of the gate are merely ornamental, and ſupport nothing at all; that the ruſtic has not all the propriety in the world for a palace; and that the main body of the pile is hardly equal to the out-ſide'.

Here give me leave to obſerve, 1. That the order of the columns is Doric, ſet on pedeſtals; a practice entirely falſe, and not to be found in any buildings of the ancients, who did not allow any baſe, more than a cincture, as I before obſerved at the church at Lime-houſe. And this abſurdity ſeems yet greater: for theſe pedeſtals are really Tuſcan, in the manner of Sebaſtian Serlio, and in no wiſe belong to the Doric order. 2. The ſhafts of the columns, being divided by ruſtics covered with frozen icicles, and therefore called froſt ruſtics, are proper decorations for the enterance into a bath or grotto, or for a caſcade, or frontiſpiece to a river, as that at York-ſtairs, &c. but not for a nobleman's palace, where ſimple grandeur only ſhould be expreſſed. Theſe columns, as our Critic obſerves, are merely ornamental, and ſuppport nothing at all, having their entablature broke back over each; another practice not to be found in any buildings of the ancients. And as this noble architect is eſteemed an admirer of ancient architecture; 'tis ſurpriſing that he ſhould ſuffer ſuch barbariſm to be erected at his own gate, ſo openly expoſed to publick cenſure. 3. The receſſes between the two outer columns on each ſide, in imitation of two niches, and ſquare blank windows over them, are rather nuiſances, than ornaments, as being incapable of being made uſeful; which therefore ſhould have been omitted, and the level ruſtics continued in their courſes without interruption. 4. Theſe ruſtics ſeem to have no affinity with their neighbouring ruſtics of the columns, as being very much leſs in their heights, and far ſhort of that grandeur which the others expreſs when well applied. 5. The enrichments of the metops between the triglyphs in the freeze of the entablature, are well conſidered; being his lordſhip's cypher, creſt, arms, &c. which are proper ornaments, and the only ſignatures to inform us, that this gate is the grand enterance to the palace of lord BURLINGTON. 6. The ruſticated brick pillaſters in the wall on each ſide of the gate, for want of having capitals and baſes, equal to the columns of the enterance, appear of too great a height for their diameter, and ſhew a want of judgment in the deſign, or of ſpirit in the execution. The rubb'd and gag'd brick-ruſtics in theſe pillaſters, being compared with the ſtone ruſticated columns, which form the ſame range, and the brick entablature they are ſuppoſed to ſuſtain, being conſidered together, imply a deficiency in the grand taſte. 7. The balls, which now are elevated on necked pedeſtals, look well, and make an elegant finiſhing: but before, when they were placed without ſuch, as thoſe are on the wall before his grace the duke of NEW-CASTLE's houſe the north-weſt corner of Lincoln's-inn fields, they made a very diſagreeable figure, without reaſon, taſte, or deſign.

To have made this gate and wall truly grand, inſtead of the pedeſtals under the columns, I would have placed a plain ſtone baſement of leſs altitude, to have been continued throughout the whole length of both gate and wall. On this baſement, at the gate, I would have erected four Doric columns upon Attic baſes; whoſe ſhafts ſhould have been plain, without ruſtics or flutings, ſupporting an entablature and pediment continued entire, and enriched as the preſent entablature is. The wall on each ſide I would have raiſed on the baſement, to a equal height with the entablature of the gate; which would have continued both ways, in the ſame manner as the preſent. But then, both that and the pillaſters alſo ſhould have been of the ſame kind of ſtone with the gate, and been continued entire throughout the whole length without any break therein. The intervals of wall between each pillaſter, I would have filled with rubbed and gaged red ſtock bricks, or rather with the ſame kind of ſtone, as the pillaſters and entablature, had my commiſſion allowed me to make it, as the Critic ſays it is, the moſt expenſive wall in England.

XLII. If between the front of every gentleman's houſe, and the ſtreet it ſtands in, court-yards could be made; as are before the two new houſes lately built in Arlington-ſtreet, next the Green-park; they would be found very convenient, and the buildings more retired and quiet. And therefore with humble ſubmiſſion to our Critic, the removing of thoſe buildings back from the ſtreet, is not barely a notion of, but a real improvement; and which, 'tis very reaſonable to believe, will be followed by the proprietors of the other buildings, as opportunity ſhall offer.—Having finiſhed the firſt walk from Temple-bar, I ſhall now return thither, 'in order to 'comment (as the Critic ſays, pag. 36.) on the moſt re-'markable things (meaning buildings) in my way to 'Weſtminſter.

WHEREAS in our laſt weeks Paper we publiſhed part of a Caſe of the proprietors of the York buildings Company, from a printed Caſe which they publiſhed about 2 years ago; and the Company having ſent one of their clerks to us to forbid our printing the remaining part of the ſaid Caſe, perhaps, upon ſome ſuggeſtion, that they are now convinced there are ſome errors and miſtakes therein; we think it juſt and reaſonable to declare, that if the Company had publiſhed their recantation, and asked pardon of any perſons therein named, by them injured, and of ſuch others as they had impoſed on thereby, we ſhould not have publiſhed any part of the ſaid Caſe; and leſt there ſhould be more errors in the remainder of it, which may injure any perſon whatſoever, we forbear publiſhing the ſame: and therefore, inſtead thereof, ſhall preſent our readers with a copy of the Company's inſtrument of ſubſcription for raiſing a joint ſtock of 1,200,000 l. which is as follows.

The governor and Company of undertakers for raiſing Thames water in York-Buildings, conſidering the great advantages that may accrue to the publick, by their purchaſing the forfeited and other eſtates in Great Britain, to be a fund for granting annuities for life, and aſſuring lives to all ſuch perſons as ſhall deſire the ſame, paying the Company ſuch valuable conſiderations as ſhall be agreed on by them, and the perſons ſo aſſured; the ſaid governor and Company, at a general court held this day, unanimouſly agree, and purſuant thereunto, lay open a ſubſcription for raiſing a ſum not exceeding one million and two hundred thouſand pounds ſterling, as a joint ſtock or fund for the purpoſes aforeſaid, and on the terms following, viz.

Imprimis. That no perſon ſhall ſubſcribe more than ten thouſand, nor leſs than two hundred pounds.

Item. That each ſubſcriber ſhall pay to the ſaid governor and Company the ſeveral ſums ſubſcribed by them, at ſuch times, and in ſuch proportions as are hereafter mentioned, or as the ſame ſhall be called for, by order of a general court of the ſaid ſubſcribers, after they ſhall be made members of the ſaid Company.

Item. That every ſubſcriber ſhall, within fourteen days after his or her ſubſcription, pay one pound for every hundred pounds ſubſcribed, to ſuch perſon or perſons as the governor and aſſiſtants of the ſaid Company ſhall appoint to receive the ſame, to intitle ſuch ſubſcriber to a ſhare in the eſtate of the ſaid Company, in proportion to the ſum by him or her ſubſcribed, to pay to the preſent proprietors of the ſaid water-works and rents belonging to the ſame, the ſum of ſeven thouſand pounds, at the time, and upon the terms agreed upon by the undertakers of this ſubſcription, for defraying the neceſſary charges of this undertaking, for fitting up a proper office, for payment of officers and ſervants ſalaries and wages, and other incident charges, for the firſt half year from this day, and to ſatisfy the undertakers of this ſubſcription for their pains and care herein.

Item. That the ſaid one per cent. ſo paid, ſhall be reckoned as part of the ſum ſubſcribed.

Item. That every perſon ſubſcribing one thouſand pounds, and his or her executors, adminiſtrators, aſſigns, or transferrees ſhall be intitled to one twelve hundredth part of the whole ſtock, eſtates, and profits ariſing to the ſaid Company, and ſo proportionably for any greater or leſs ſum ſubſcribed; provided ſuch ſubſcriber, his or her executors, adminiſtrators, aſſigns, or transferrees pay in ſuch parts of the ſums by him or her ſubſcribed as ſhall be called for as aforeſaid.

Item. That the ſubſcription of every perſon that ſhall not pay one per cent. as aforeſaid, ſhall be utterly void and of no effect.

Item. That every ſubſcriber, upon notice given in the London Gazette or Daily Courant, or left in writing at his or her place of Abode, ſhall pay to the ſaid governor and Company, nine pounds per cent. of the reſpective ſums by them ſubſcribed, in manner following, (that is to ſay,) four and a half per cent. part of the ſaid nine per cent. within two months after the ſubſcription ſhall be cloſed, and four and a half per cent. more within four months then next following.

Item. That the whole money ſo ſubſcribed ſhall be the joint ſtock or fund of the ſaid governor and Company, for the purpoſes aforeſaid.

Item. That from Michaelmas laſt paſt, the charges of carrying on the water works belonging to the ſaid Company, and the profits ariſing thereby, as alſo the profits ariſing by purchaſing forfeited and other eſtates, by granting annuities for life, by aſſuring lives, and the intereſt and all other advantages that ſhall be made by the ſaid ſubſcribed joint ſtock or fund, ſhall be divided amongſt the ſaid ſubſcribers, in proportion to their ſtock, by half yearly dividends.

Item. That each ſubſcriber ſhall be admitted a member of the ſaid Company, when the ſubſcription ſhall be cloſed, and one per cent. ſhall be payed as aforeſaid.

Item. That every member of the ſaid Company that ſhall have, by ſubſcription, transfer, or otherwiſe, one thouſand pounds of the ſaid ſtock in his or her own name and right, ſhall have one vote; every member that ſhall have four thouſand pounds thereof in his or her own name and right, ſhall have two votes; every member that ſhall have ſeven thouſand pounds thereof in his or her own name and right, ſhall have three votes; and every member that ſhall have ten thouſand pounds thereof in his or her own name and right, ſhall have four votes, and no more, in all elections, and on other buſineſs, at general courts.

In witneſs whereof the ſaid governor and Company have cauſed their common ſeal to be hereunto affixed, the 27th day of October, Anno Dom 1719, and in the 6th year of the reign of our ſovereign lord George, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, king, d fender of the faith, &c.

And we the under-written do ſeverally ſubſcribe upon the foregoing terms, and do oblige ourſelves to perform all the articles above-mentioned, on our parts to be performed: in witneſs whereof we have hereunto ſeverally ſet our hands and ſeals the day and year above-written.

P. S. The ſaid ſubſcription was then compleated, and the ſaid ſum of 1,200,000 l. actually ſubſcribed accordingly, and how far the ſame has been carried into due execution, ſhall be inſerted in our ſucceeding Papers with truth and candour.

The XVIth ODE of ANACREON.

Upon himſelf.

You the Theban wars recite;
He the Phrygians noiſy fight;
I Beauty's victories, in chains
Which my captive heart detains.
'Twas not horſe that vanquiſh'd me,
Nor foot arm'd, by land, or ſea:
But far other forces new,
Darts from brighteſt eyes that threw.

From the PEGASUS in Grub-ſtreet.

IN all our controverſies with our apoſtatizing brethren, we have acted ſo fair a part, as to quote their own words. We never thought ourſelves at liberty, either to vary or miſrepreſent their expreſſions; to alter the ſtate of the queſtion in diſpute; or, when we were preſſed hard, to drop it, and proceed to another ſubject. In all theſe reſpects, the conduct of the MAN of TASTE has been directly contrary to ours — This intelligent and upright judge paſſed a ſentence of condemnation upon a painter's whole works in general, and upon four in particular at Powis-houſe; the ſubjects of three of which he did not ſo much as know. He took the introduction of JUDITH to HOLOFERNES, their banquet in his tent, and the four ſeaſons, to be the meeting of DAVID and ABIGAIL, the banquet of ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, and the out-ſet of the MORNING. Theſe he imagined were the ſubjects of thoſe three pieces; which, as deſigning to repreſent them, he abſolutely condemned. Theſe blunders we detected and expoſed: he returned no anſwer 'till ſeveral weeks after. We have almoſt gone through his Defence, and here beg leave to preſent the reader with the concluſion of it, and with our reply.

'The ſtory of JUDITH and HOLOFERNES, which we 'are told by the Grub-ſtreet Journal, is the ſubject of 'the Spaniſh ambaſſador's ſtair-caſe [if it be, own it; if 'it be not, deny it] is one of thoſe wretched barren tales, 'which the greateſt genius would be puzzled to make 'any thing of; but in the hands of a middling one, as 'is viſible in the caſe before us, becomes lifeleſs and inſipid'. —— This gentleman told us ſome months ago, that Signior AMICONI was but a middling genius; alleging for proof, that he had drawn DAVID and ABIGAIL, ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, &c. in a lifeleſs and inſipid manner. We diſcovered his ABIGAIL and CLEOPATRA to be JUDITH, and his DAVID and ANTONY to be HOLOFERNES. What is his anſwer? The Story of JUDITH and HOLOFERNES is a wretched barren tale, drawn in a lifeleſs and inſipid manner. Be it ſo; as long as it is not the ſtory of DAVID and ABIGAIL, or of ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, we are ſafe enough.

'Neither is it leſs ſo in the perſons of JUDITH and 'HOLOFERNES, than ANTONY and CLEOPATRA.'—— Strange indeed! The ſtory of JUDITH, &c. told in the perſons of JUDITH, &c. is not leſs lifeleſs and inſipid, than if it had been told in the perſons of ANTONY and CLEOPATRA.

'And unleſs the Grub-ſtreet Critick can prove the 'paintings are excellent as they now are, and that JUDITH and HOLOFERNES are writ in the faces of 'the principal figures, my miſtake will be no diſgrace to me, nor advantage to Signior AMICONI.'

——— That this gentleman's miſtake [miſtakes he ſhould have ſay'd] will be no advantage to the painter, we readily own; but not that it will be no diſgrace to himſelf, tho' we cannot perform the conditions here required. For he himſelf, we believe, will readily allow, that paintings may be excellent, tho' we cannot prove them to be ſo. The world in general has that opinion of theſe; and therefore it is his buſineſs to prove that they do not deſerve it.——— And ſuppoſe they do not, few or none, we imagine, will agree to his ridiculous aſſertion, that it is no diſgrace to one, who ſets himſelf up for a connoiſſeur in painting, to miſtake the ſubject of three pictures in four. A miſtake in a very excellent picture may be indeed a greater diſgrace: but a miſtake, or rather three miſtakes together, muſt certainly be ſomewhat diſgraceful.—The other part of the condition is ſtill more unreaſonable, That we ſhould prove, that JUDITH and HOLOFERNES are writ in the faces of the principal figures; whether he means literally, or figuratively. He cannot poſſibly ſure be ſo ſtupid as to mean the former: and it is almoſt as ſtupid, to require of us, that we ſhould prove that figures plainly repreſent the perſons for whom they are deſigned; which if they do, they muſt do it in ſo plain a manner as to need no proof. And this we aſſert to be the caſe of the paintings here in diſpute.

He then proceeds to ask ſix wiſe queſtions ‘1. Whe‘ther every body would once dream of ſuch a ſtupid ad‘venture being ſpun out into three diviſions? 2. Whe‘ther, if it was, they would not have naturally expected ‘that the death of HOLOFERNES would have been one ‘of them? 3. Whether the meeting of any two per‘ſons in the field, or their banquetting in a tent, are ‘circumſtances important enough for an hiſtorical piece? ‘4. Whether they [theſe circumſtances] might not be as ‘eaſily and naturally underſtood to be ANTONY and ‘CLEOPATRA, and DAVID and ABIGAIL, as JUDITH ‘and HOLOFERNES? 5. Whether, with his refinements, ‘ANTONY and CLEOPATRA would not have anſwer'd ‘better than JUDITH and HOLOFERNES? 6. If they ‘would, whether he deſerves to be treated as ignorant ‘and impudent for preſuming to cenſure ſo great a ſtran‘ger as Signior AMICONI, or wage war with ſo profound ‘a Critic, as the author of the Grub-ſtreet Journal? — Paſſing by four of theſe queſtions, as nothing at all to the purpoſe; in anſwer to the 5th we ſay, That not only the circumſtances, but the figures, cannot poſſibly be underſtood to be ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, DAVID and ABIGAIL, by any perſon of ſenſe, who has read, and remembers the hiſtory of the two former in the Roman, and of the two latter in the Jewiſh authors: and that hundreds of perſons, who have gone out of curioſity to ſee theſe paintings, ſince the publication of our firſt Journal concerning them, have declared themſelves of the ſame opinion, in great deriſion of our Critic. — To the 6th and laſt queſtion we anſwer, That we never treated him as ignorant and impudent on either of the accounts he here mentions; but for reaſons, the ſtrength of which he has not at all invalidated, but confirmed, by his Defence. For, to excuſe his ignorance, he has not only moſt ignorantly aſſerted, that ‘the ſubject of every good picture ‘is plain to EVERY BODY, by having the names writ ‘[as it were, I ſuppoſe] in the faces of the principal fi‘gures’; but likewiſe ſtill moſt impudently imputes the occaſion of his blunders to the obſcurity of paintings, the ſubjects of which are clear and evident, to all who have read the Hiſtory of JUDITH, and OVID's Metamorphoſes. In the latter of which he ſeems as little read, as in the former; otherwiſe he could not have miſtaken a picture of the Seaſons of the year, for one of the Out-ſet of the MORNING.

On Poet R—PH's ſtudying of painting and architecture.

The painter's arts and poet's well agree:
This, ſpeaking picture; that, mute poetry.
No architecture falls to poet's ſhare,
But that which builds high caſtles in the air.
